About This Resource

This resource expands on the policy found under I.1.11 “Lay Ministry” in The Manual. It is specifically for communities of faith that would like to create a lay ministry position accountable to the governing body of the community of faith, and for baptized lay people who are considering appointment to congregational accountable positions.

This resource contains

- policy and procedures that must be followed; and
- additional resources, including position categorization guidelines and lay ministry competencies

Other resources that may prove helpful to a community of faith that is considering a lay ministry position, or that has appointed a layperson to a congregationally accountable position, are Ministry and Personnel Committees: Policy, Procedures, Practices and Ministry and Personnel Committees: Resources for Ministry and Personnel Committees (available on the Handbooks page of united-church.ca).

What Is Congregational Designated Ministers Policy?

Congregational designated ministers policy is policy that

- defines a congregational designated minister
- defines congregational designated ministry
- defines the employment relationship between the person appointed and the community of faith
- defines the role of the regional council in oversight of congregation designated ministry, including
  - categorization of positions, and
  - discipline of congregational designated ministers

Congregational Designated Ministers are baptized lay people who are appointed to lay ministry positions in communities of faith. Congregational designated ministers are accountable to the governing body of the community of faith in all matters except discipline. In matters of discipline, the person is accountable to the regional council.

Congregational designated ministry is paid lay ministry within communities of faith that serves in a team with called or appointed ministry personnel and is accountable to the governing body of the community of faith. The positions are focused on one or more specific areas of the community’s ministry; responsibilities do not extend to the wider church.
Theological Grounding

We are each given particular gifts of the Spirit. For the sake of the world, God calls all followers of Jesus to Christian ministry.

In the church, some are called to specific ministries of leadership, both lay and ordered; some witness to the good news; some uphold the art of worship; some comfort the grieving and guide the wandering; some build up the community of wisdom; some stand with the oppressed and work for justice.

To embody God’s love in the world, the work of the church requires the ministry and discipleship of all believers. A Song of Faith

Manual Policy: What Has Changed

The 43rd General Council made the following change to congregational designated ministers policy:

Lay ministry positions accountable to the governing body may only be filled by congregational designated ministers.

In the previous version of The Manual, 2016, the policy stated:

I.1.8.3 Filling Positions Accountable to Governing Body

A position that is accountable to the governing body may be filled by

(a) a member of the order of ministry; or

(b) a congregational designated ministry under section I.1.8.3 below

(Employment of a Congregational Designated Minister)

The current version of The Manual, 2019, states:

I.1.11.3 Filling Positions Accountable to Governing Body

A position that is accountable to the governing body may be filled by a congregational designated minister under section I.1.11.4 below.

The governing body is responsible for deciding on a search process to fill the
If a community of faith wishes to call or appoint a member of the order of ministry to a position that has been classified as a congregationally accountable position, the community of faith would have to request that the regional council approve the position and call or appoint the ministry personnel through pastoral relations processes.

Ethical Standards and Standards of Practice

Congregational designated ministers (CDMs) are employees of the community of faith and are accountable to the governing body of the community of faith as stipulated in their position description. For the purposes of disciplinary oversight, congregational designated ministers are accountable to the regional council (see section J.8 of The Manual).

The policy that defines the effectiveness of congregational designated ministers and ministry personnel, known as the Ethical Standards and Standards of Practice for Ministry Personnel, was approved by the 38th General Council. Please familiarize yourself with these standards (available on the Handbooks page of united-church.ca).

Congregation Proposes CDM Position

Congregational designated ministry is community-based ministry that addresses a specific area of need within a community of faith.

The needs may be identified through the regular review of the community of faith’s profile, from the governing body, or from another part of the community that is living out the ministry and reasons that lay ministry leadership would be of benefit.

The governing body of the community of faith or a team develops a position description that meets the identified needs. The categorization guidelines and ministry competencies for congregational designated ministers may be of assistance in this task.

The governing body then submits the position description to the regional council using the Community of Faith Request for Categorization of Lay Ministry Position form (available on the Forms page of united-church.ca).
Regional Council Assesses Position Description
The regional council assesses the position description, referencing the categorization guidelines. The regional council

- affirms the position as congregationally accountable (i.e., lay employee or congregational designated minister), or
- recommends that the position be a denominationally accountable ministry position (i.e., ministry personnel)

The regional council records its decision on position categorization on the Request for Categorization form. The form is returned to the community of faith; the regional council retains a copy for its records.

If the regional council categorizes the position as congregationally accountable, the community of faith may proceed with a search process to fill the position.

If the regional council categorizes the position as denominationally accountable, the community of faith may enter into a dialogue with the regional council to determine

- whether the position description may be altered to fit within the scope of a congregational designated minister, or
- what process is needed to appoint or call ministry personnel to the community of faith.

Filling a denominationally accountable position either prompts the completion of a profile, if the community of faith has not recently completed one, or requires the posting of a position followed by a search process. A denominationally accountable position may be filled by any ministry personnel: a designated lay minister, a diaconal minister, or an ordained minister.

Congregation Undertakes Search Process
The search process for a congregational designated minister may be undertaken by the governing body or a search team identified by the governing body.

If the search process proceeds to fill a congregational designated minister position, the search team is responsible for ensuring that the successful applicant has, or is willing to acquire through a continuing education plan, the core competencies required of a congregational designated minister.

The governing body of the community of faith and the search team are responsible for identifying and testing for competencies specific to the needs of their community, as reflected in the position description. For reference, competencies specific to youth ministry, parish nursing, pastoral care, education, outreach, worship, and music ministry can be found starting on page 18.

Governing Body Makes an Appointment
Once the search team has made a decision about an applicant, it brings a recommendation to the governing body for a decision. The congregational designated minister must be appointed for a specified period of time, to be determined by the governing body. The appointment may later be renewed.

Upon appointment, the applicant whose name is before the governing body of the community of faith is responsible for providing an original, current vulnerable sector (level 2) police records check (dated within the last six months), of which the governing body may retain a copy. A new police records check must be provided to the governing body every sixth year as the appointment is renewed.

Terms of Appointment

- In negotiating terms, all federal and provincial employment standards must be met.
- A congregational designated minister serving 14 hours a week or more must be enrolled in the United Church Pension and Benefits Plans.
- The community of faith is responsible for determining a continuing education budget and time allotment for the congregational designated minister at the time of appointment. Congregational designated ministers meet very specific needs within faith communities. Effective and dynamic leadership requires continuous education and learning. The congregational designated minister, in collaboration with the Ministry and Personnel Committee of the community of faith, discerns the best use of the continuing education resources in the context of the congregational appointment.

Accountability, Supervision, and Oversight

- Congregational designated ministers are appointed by and accountable to the governing body of the community of faith. A congregational designated minister may only be appointed to a community of faith being served by a member of the order of ministry or a designated lay minister.
- The regional council is the primary court of discipline for a congregational designated minister. For the purpose of oversight and discipline, the policies and procedures for lay members are adapted as necessary (The Manual, J.8.).

Categorization Guidelines

These are guidelines for affirming that a congregational designated ministry position, prepared by a congregation in response to specific needs identified within the community, is congregationally accountable.

Each participant in a congregation brings gifts and skills that contribute to the congregation’s well-being and to its capacity to be in mission. As the work of one and the same Spirit, each contribution counts toward equipping the saints for ministry. When a paid leadership position is involved, it is necessary, for the purposes of accountability, good order, stewardship, and justice, to make some determinations about the equitable relationship of one paid position to another in the context of mutuality in mission.

The following guidelines assist in determining whether a position is congregationally accountable or denominationally accountable. It is the role of the regional council to receive congregational designated ministry position descriptions from communities of faith and to assess the positions to determine that they fit within the scope of a congregationally accountable appointment.

Process of Categorization by the Regional Council Pastoral Relations Committee

1. Review the proposed position description for clarity by answering the following questions:
   - What are the roles and responsibilities of the position?
   - What is the purpose of the position?
   - What skills and education are needed to accomplish the role?

2. Review the categorization criteria and the definitions. It is possible that the level for the position can be determined simply on the basis of the definitions and the criteria. If so, complete part B on the Position Categorization Worksheet (page 16) and part C on the Request for Categorization form (available on the Forms page of united-church.ca), and forward them to the regional council for approval.

3. If the Detailed Rating Process is being used, read through the guiding principles in each section, determine the rating (1–4) that best fits the position, and record it on part C of the worksheet.

4. When all sections have been completed, total the points on the worksheet. The level of the position has now been determined. Positions in levels 1–3 are congregationally accountable, and positions in level 4 are denominationally accountable.

5. Record the level in Part C on the Request for Categorization form and forward it to the regional council for approval.
Position Categorization Process

1. Congregation proposes CDM position

2. Regional council assesses position description

   - Position is assessed as accountable to the congregation (level 1–3)
   - Position is assessed as denominationally accountable (level 4)

3. Position is a lay employee position (level 1)
   - Congregational search for lay employee

4. Position is a congregational designated minister position (level 2–3)
   - Search for baptized lay person suitable to fill congregational designated minister position

5. Congregation must decide whether to move forward with denominationally accountable position or reconsider position description
   - Community of faith profile is revised/developed
   - Search team searches for ministry personnel to fill the position

Criteria
Each position is a collection of tasks, duties, and responsibilities. It is sometimes difficult to make accurate and explicit comparisons of one complete position description to another. For this reason, the categorization process outlined below determines the weight of each position’s contribution to the ministry of the community of faith according to four criteria found in all positions.

- Breadth and depth of experience/knowledge required: every kind of knowledge and skill needed for acceptable performance
- Accountability and decision making: the accountability for actions and their consequences, freedom to act, how and where decisions are made
- Complexity of focus: the number of programs and areas of congregational life involved, problem solving, dealing with ambiguity and long-range considerations, analytical thinking, the ability to evaluate, create, and reason
- Boundaries on involvement: impact of actions and sphere of influence/representation

Detailed Rating Process

Section I: Breadth and depth of experience/knowledge required
This criterion measures every kind of knowledge and skill needed for acceptable performance—e.g., specialized knowledge and skills, coordinating and integrating skills, and human relations skills.

<table>
<thead>
<tr>
<th>Rating</th>
<th>Guiding Principles</th>
</tr>
</thead>
<tbody>
<tr>
<td>1</td>
<td>Basic knowledge of job fundamentals in a position that is very specific with regard to its purpose, who is being served, and how the work will be performed. The position requires experience in applying procedures that generally are well defined and straightforward, with occasional discretion required. Human relations skills: interactions are within a well-defined group, and maintaining courteous, healthy working relationships within the group is important; does not involve facilitating the leadership of others.</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>2</td>
<td>Experience in and knowledge of one particular area of the community of faith’s ministry/mission, such as youth group leadership, church school coordination, or pastoral visiting, with the ability to apply a similar program in a different context. Human relations skills: the ability to listen; the ability to interact appropriately with individuals and groups/committees connected to or interested in the activities undertaken; appropriate awareness of related activities in the congregation. Accomplished in planning and implementing activities and/or practical procedures that are moderately complex.</td>

3 Knowledge and experience for oversight, planning, and implementing a key program of the congregation, such as Christian education for all ages, a youth program, or a community outreach program. Skills in several activities with basic understanding of underlying theology, theory, and principles.

Human relations skills: the ability to function pastorally; the ability to interpret the program and to facilitate the involvement of others in leading, supporting, and developing the program.

Ability to give leadership in a congregational program/process that involves varied activities and has an impact on other aspects of the congregation’s ministry and mission.

4 Knowledge and experience needed for oversight of a major program (or several key programs) that incorporates most dimensions of congregational life (worship, pastoral care, education, outreach).

Well-grounded in theology, biblical knowledge, theories, principles, and the complex techniques/activities involved in community of faith leadership.

Human relations skills: insight into how individuals are motivated; understanding of how to encourage growth in discipleship in order to fulfill the community of faith’s ministry; ability to deal constructively with conflict.

Ability to plan, guide, and assess a major congregational program/process that has substantial functional diversity and requires involvement with the congregation’s overall ministry and mission goals.

Section II: Accountability and decision making

This criterion covers freedom to act, accountability for actions and their consequences, and where and how decisions are made.

<thead>
<tr>

<th>Guiding Principles</th>
</tr>
</thead>
<tbody>
<tr>
<td>1</td>
<td>Position has well-defined procedures related to an activity within one area of the community of faith’s ‘s ministry (e.g., coordinating the church nursery, leading a small group on a weekly basis), and is overseen by an individual or a small committee. Ability to make decisions is determined by established procedures and by supervisor/liaison person or coordinating group.</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>2</td>
<td>Position has relatively well-defined procedures, but latitude is given to deal with some ambiguous situations. Oversight of this position is provided by appropriate community of faith governance. Most decisions about activities and procedures are made in consultation with ministry personnel, a community of faith leader, and/or committee(s) within the community of faith.</td>
</tr>
</tbody>
</table>
Decisions made without consultation are subject to precedents and well-defined policy.
Accountability resides at the committee level.

3 Position responsibilities are defined within the broader context of the community of faith’s ministry and mission and may be changed, depending upon circumstances. Ability to deal with ambiguous situations will be part of this position, and there is considerable scope for freedom of action.
Works closely with one or more committees to produce desired outcomes in one or more areas of community of faith life. May work jointly with other ministry staff for coordination purposes. This position is accountable at the committee level (e.g., Christian Education Committee, Health Ministries Committee), but some decisions about this work may be made by the governing body of the community of faith and require the involvement of the ministry personnel.

4 Position is very broadly defined and dealing with ambiguity will be a large part of this position.
Accountability is at the governing body level as well as with the denomination. Input about decisions and actions is required from various community of faith committees, leaders, and the regional council. Freedom to act, within the boundaries of ministry personnel, will rest with the incumbent.
The incumbent for this position will act in a community of faith capacity very similar to that of an order of ministry person.
The position has responsibilities involving significant activities and resources of the community of faith and is the sole paid position accountable for the outcomes of the work involved.

Section III: Complexity of focus
This criterion covers problem solving, dealing with ambiguity, difficulty of the thinking required, and the number of programs and areas of congregational life involved.

<table>

<tr>
<td>2</td>
<td>The situation has some variation requiring the search for solutions within an area of learned approaches. Having experience in dealing with similar situations will be very helpful. </tr>
</tbody>
3 Situations are quite different, requiring a search for solutions mainly within the area of learned approaches. Some theological, analytical, and constructive thinking is required. Decisions take into account community of faith policy, where what is stated but not how.

Thinking about one or more areas of the community of faith’s ministry within a frame of reference related to the congregation’s overall mission, with considerable scope for making choices about how to carry out responsibilities.

4 Situations are varied, requiring analytical, interpretive, evaluative, and/or constructive thinking skills. Ability is needed to access biblical and theological perspectives, to develop new concepts, and to help people comprehend the larger picture.

Thinking within concepts, principles, and broad guidelines related to the church’s ministry and mission goals and objectives; many intangibles or unstructured aspects to the context.

Section IV: Boundaries of involvement
This criterion measures impact of action, representative authority, and sphere of influence.
